

Initial Post.

The purpose of this blog is to serve as a repository for things I learn throughout graduate school. More concretely, I would like to accomplish two things:

1. Unify existing expositions into a single narrative: Even for topics where there are already excellent expositions, I find it useful to paraphrase, reorganize, and occasionally add my own explanation.
2. Fill in gaps in the expository literature: I think some topics are harder to learn not by nature but by absence of a good exposition. I aspire to fill in these gaps.

These are tentative aspirations, and I make no promise to strictly adhere to them in the future.
